

Hunt the Slipper

About: The origins of this game are not entirely clear, but it could have been played as early as Medieval times. Different variations of this game exist as well.

Number of players: at least 4

Other supplies needed: a slipper (or other object of your choosing).

Instructions:

1. Find an object to play with. Traditionally a slipper would be used however, you can use any object you wish.
2. Players sit in a circle with one player sitting in the middle of it. The player in the middle will count to ten or sing a verse from a song.
3. Meanwhile, the other players pass the object along behind their backs.
4. When the player in the middle is done counting or singing, he/ she can open his/her eyes.
5. The other players must stop passing the slipper once the counting/ singing ends BUT they can still move/ pretend they have something behind their backs even if they are not holding the object.
6. The player in the middle must then guess who is holding the object. If the player in the middle is wrong, he/she must count/ sing again as the other players continue to pass the object around.
7. If he/she is correct, then the person holding the object must sit in the middle and take a turn.
