

Kim's Game

About: named after a book by Rudyard Kipling in 1901, titled Kim, "Kim's Game" is a game of memory. Though it may seem easy at first, it is certainly trickier than it appears.

Number of players: at least 2

Other supplies needed: 5 to 10 objects of your choosing, paper, and a writing utensil for each player.

Instructions:

1. One player chooses 5 to 10 objects. These objects should be unrelated if possible.

For example: instead of using a spoon, a fork, a knife, a butter knife, and a dessert fork, try using a spoon, a pen, a lego, a glove, and a feather. Choosing unrelated items makes it more challenging for the memory and more fun!

2. Present these objects to the other players to look at.
3. After a few seconds of observation, the items should be covered with a cloth, or removed from view.
4. Then the players must write down which objects they remember seeing.
5. The player who remembers the most objects correctly, wins the round and chooses a new set of 5 to 10 items.
